Professor Cheryl Kickett-Tucker

Personal Information

Professor Cheryl Kickett-Tucker is an Aboriginal Western Australian who is a Wadjuk traditional owner. She has traditional ties to her grandparents' Balladong and Yued country. Cheryl was born in Subiaco, Western Australia and has lived most of her life in Perth. She is a dedicated wife (23 years) and mother of three children. Cheryl was educated in both Australia and the United States of America.

In 2000, Cheryl completed her PhD which explored the sense of self, identity and self-esteem of urban Aboriginal children in the school sport setting. Cheryl developed a series of 5 culturally appropriate instruments for racial identity and self-esteem across the lifespan. Other research projects included Aboriginal youth social inclusion; indicators of success, resilience and wellbeing; Aboriginal perinatal mental health, cultural security and audit of health services for Aboriginal families, outdoor education (Bush School) as a form of culturally secure Aboriginal education.

In 2008, Cheryl founded Pindi Pindi Pty Ltd- Centre for Research Excellence in Aboriginal Wellbeing and has expanded it from one person to over 15 people working on various projects covering education and health related topics.

Cheryl's research strength has been the translation of her research to Aboriginal community development programs. She has instrumental and lead in the development of the Too Solid Aboriginal parenting program; Moorditj Koorlong, an Aboriginal youth cultural, education and life skills program; Solid Kids Solid School anti-bullying program and an Aboriginal perinatal mental health program (in development). More recently, she has developed Kaat, Koort and Hoops, a basketball lifestyle program for 4-12 year old children who have potential but limited opportunities to enhance their wellbeing.

Cheryl's commitment to community development is important to her and she currently is a voluntary member for the past 15 years of the Board of Directors of Koya Aboriginal Corporation, a local not for profit Aboriginal controlled and owned community organisation in Midland, WA.

Dr Kickett-Tucker was awarded a PhD from Edith Cowan University, Perth and a Master of Science (University of Oregon, USA), a Bachelor of Applied Science (Edith Cowan University, Perth) and an Associate Diploma of Applied Science (Edith Cowan University, Perth).

She has also received numerous awards including 2019 Australian of the Year, WA Local Hero Award, National NAIDOC Scholar of the Year in 2001, WA NAIDOC Scholar of the Year in 2001, WA NAIDOC Sportswoman of the Year in 1992, Midland NAIDOC Community Organisation 2018, Black Women's Action Group In Education Foundation (now Roberta Sykes Foundation) Scholarship 1992 and the Queens Trust Award for Young Australians, WA in both 1992 and 1995.

Cheryl currently holds the following positions:

- Executive Director, Pindi Pindi Pty Ltd, Centre for Research Excellence in Aboriginal Wellbeing
- Professor, Faculty of Humanities, School of Education, Curtin University
- Adjunct Professor, School of Medicine, Notre Dame University
- Adjunct Associate Professor, Centre for Child Health Research, The University of Western Australia
- Honorary Research Fellow, Telethon Kids
- Honorary Consultant, Indigenous Health InfoNet

Cheryl has also competed in elite level sports as a member of the Australia National Women's Basketball League and the Western Australian State Basketball League as a player and coach. In 1985, she was named Most Valuable Player for the National Aboriginal Basketball Carnival. In 2010, Cheryl was inaugurated into the Sports Hall of Fame at her high school, Governor Stirling SHS.

Cheryl is an emerging author of children's fiction books and Chief Editor of Mia Mia Aboriginal Community Development Text Book (published by Cambridge University Press). She is a very keen amateur photographer who likes to capture the strengths and positive elements of being Aboriginal.
